Subject: DMV Hearing

One of the reasons I left Britain to come to USA when I was 40 was to get away from the terrible inefficiencies of the British bureaucracy. Now, 35 years later, I can say that with one exception America is vastly more efficient. That one exception is the DMV. Like everyone else I have had to endure the guaranteed long lines and the interminable waits. What should be a simple transaction always turns out to be a whole morning of futility. I do not blame the DMV staff, it is the monopolistic system that is at fault.

The DMV is the closest thing that USA has to communist Russia.

Please, do anything that will change this.

Sincerely,

Tony Kaye
